Hi, I use (X)ubuntu 14.04.1 LTS with Nvidia graphics, and I have issues with fonts rendering and system fonts. I use the default gnome-tweaks packages for ubuntu. When I disable subpixel rendering or native rendering, fonts look great, but when i try to change the font to a different size, like 12pt, the font doesn't display at all. Now, if I change the font back to what it was before I started tweeking, it renders normally, but just for one second when I open a program. After that, the fonts become all square and look awful. tiarzac January 16, 2022 at 10:21 pm.
