Playing the long game with your education It's no secret that today's graduates are going into a hot job market. In fact, a recent report showed that there were more job openings than people available to fill them. The most important thing you can do to reduce stress and anxiety about your job search is get a job during your senior year. If you want to keep a job after graduation, you may need to get experience and a degree under your belt before applying for the positions you want. If you're asking yourself, "What do I have to do to get a job?" or "How will I pay for school?" here are a few tips to help: Pair up with someone who has an interest in your field. Every job needs a certain amount of people to fill it. A lot of companies will hire people after they graduate if they have work experience from internships. Internships are great ways to gain experience. They allow you to see a company in action and get the chance to work in the job you're interested in. It's a win-win for both you and the company. You earn experience and the company builds your resume. Once you start the job hunt, constantly keep your resume fresh. Remember, a fresh resume makes it easy to show employers all of the experience you've gained on your career path. This is the one way to beat out the competition. It can be easy to get discouraged about your job search when you're trying to stay busy and pay for school. There are many things you can do to cope with this, which include: Make friends with people you trust. When you're in school, it can be really hard to make friends that aren't connected to your school. Spending time with people who understand what you're going through can really make you feel better. Focus on your strengths. If you're not confident in a particular skill, you can always seek tutoring or workshops. You can also take online courses to help build f678ea9f9e
